

Dr. Jordan addresses variety of issues at open meeting

Gallaudet University President I. King Jordan summarized a number of campus concerns for the university community at an open meeting held Sept. 10 in Elstad Auditorium.

The information session dealt with the new facilities master plan; ongoing construction projects; the future Conference Center for Training and Development, the majority of which will be funded by a $12 million grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation; the current standing of federal appropriations; University priorities; and plans for University Week.

The facilities master plan, Jordan explained, which is required by the District of Columbia zoning office, lists all campus construction that may take place over the next 10 years.

The new master plan includes the conference center, the Hall Memorial Building construction, a building that would be erected at the current site of Hughes Gymnasium, and a new dormitory.

"Just because something is listed on the facility master plan does not mean it will be built," Jordan said. Factors such as cost and the availability of funding, or the need for a facility, influence the decision to build it.

Jordan summarized the status of current construction projects. "The renovation that occurred over the summer in Hall Memorial Building was a difficult time," he said, noting that some employees in the building were inconvenienced. But, he said, "we are now out of the chaos." The contractor now aims to finish the HMB renovation by August 1993, a year sooner than planned, Jordan said.

In response to a question about the possible impact of HMB renovation on classes in session, Jordan said that the contractor has agreed to conduct activities that could prove to be disruptive after 4 p.m. Jordan urged people to contact the construction communication coordinator at x5353 to register complaints or questions and to contact the Department of Safety and Security in case of an emergency.

The renovation of College Hall, which will be completed by the summer of 1992, will result in the building looking much as it did when it was built in 1887, said Jordan. "I think we will all be proud and happy when the renovation is complete," he said. "I look forward to seeing the building look as the historical treasure it really is."

Renovation to the exterior of Chapel Hall will be completed by December 1992, Jordan said. The project is necessary because the building's exterior was becoming unsafe. The interior is sound, Jordan said.

The roof for the Model Secondary School for the Deaf is being replaced, solving the problem of water leakage, and improving energy efficiency and lighting, Jordan said. Repairs will be finished by the end of the year.

The new conference center will be designed to cater to the needs of deaf people and to be completely accessible to people with disabilities, Jordan said. "The center will make a big difference in the type of conferences and activities we can have at Gallaudet," he said. The center will be located at the site of the present West Office Building, which will be torn down. The building is designed to complement "Ole Jim" and will use the same type of brick and architecture.

Jordan explained that in order to replace parking places lost to construction, two temporary parking lots have been created. He announced that a Parking Committee, consisting of representatives from faculty, Pre-College, administration, staff, and students has been formed to work on a parking plan that will best meet the needs of everyone.

On communication issues, Jordan mentioned the new program of intensive sign language training for new staff and the Sign Communication Proficiency Interview (SCPI) test approved by the University Faculty last fall to evaluate the faculty's signing skills. "We want people to improve their sign language skills if they need to do so," Jordan said, "but we must also give support to help people improve."

Jordan said that he and Provost Harvey Corson have been meeting regularly to discuss communication goals established last spring. "We are now selecting a group of people to work on issues such as researching the components of good classroom teaching at Gallaudet and what kind of communication is best suited to classroom teaching here," he said.

University Week Oct. 20-26 marks the fifth year since Gallaudet became a university. Jordan urged all members of the campus community to attend the convocation that will be held on Friday, Oct. 25.

In response to questions from the audience, Jordan said it is uncertain whether or not Gallaudet will acquire the vacant building located behind Krug Hall, formerly Hamilton Junior High.

Asked about the effect of the suspension of four Gallaudet security officers—now under indictment for involuntary manslaughter in the Carl Dupree case—on the adequacy of campus security staffing, Jordan said that the University was taking every step to ensure that there will be enough officers to provide adequate security.

SAVE GALLAUDET...

New recycling program begins

Attendees at Gallaudet's football season opener against Jersey City College, held at Hotchkiss Field Sept. 14, also got a lesson in recycling.

After the game, Brenda Keller, coordinator of Auxiliary Services for Business Services, told the crowd about the University's recycling efforts and what Gallaudet expects the campus community to do toward those efforts. Keller also said University facilities will soon display the new recycling logo: "Save the Earth. Save Gallaudet. Recycle Now."

Gallaudet's recycling program began last year, when the Physical Plant Department equipped all campus buildings with receptacles for white and colored paper, a move that was in accord with the District of Columbia's recycling policy to separate paper from other trash. This year, dormitories and most academic and office buildings also have bins for aluminum cans.

Beginning this semester, the University is asking students and employees to take a more active role in recycling newspapers, glass bottles, and plastic bags.

"It's not safe to have newspapers accumulate in the dormitories because they could catch fire," said Keller. So at New Student Orientation and at the football game, Keller told students to collect their newspapers in brown paper bags or tie them with string and deposit them in the recycling bin behind Clerc Hall. People also are asked to put glass bottles in the bin.

In addition, the bookstore has a receptacle for plastic bags and the snack bar soon will have containers for styrofoam, said Keller.

Organizations affiliated with the Student Body Government will check the dormitories to see that students follow the recycling rules, said Keller.

Celebration planned to recognize teacher education program centennial

Gallaudet is celebrating the 100th year of its teacher education program with a Distinguished Lecture Series, a birthday celebration, a centennial walk, and an awards ceremony honoring two of the nation's most outstanding teachers in deafness education.

The celebration, which is sponsored by the School of Education and Human Services (SEHS) and the Department of Education, is also being used as the occasion to inaugurate the Centennial Endowment Fund, according to SEHS Dean David Martin. Support for the fund will enable Gallaudet to provide new educational opportunities such as scholarships for deaf students entering professional fields in deafness, visits and lectures by renowned leaders in a variety of fields, a program for faculty research and development, and a chair in the field of deafness for a senior faculty member of national prominence.

Dr. Martin said the endowment goal is $3,000,000. Gifts received by the end of the year will be matched by federal funds.

The events scheduled for the centennial celebration will begin this Friday, Sept. 20, with a campus walking tour to view places of historical interest for teacher education, followed by refreshments and presentation of certificates to all walk participants in "Ole Jim." The tour, which will begin at faculty row at 3 p.m., will be led by Dr. Barbara Bodner-Johnson, chairwoman of the Department of Education. To register, call x5530.

The Centennial Birthday Celebration, an invitation-only event for educators and financial supporters of the University's professional preparation programs, will be held Wednesday, Oct. 2, at 7 p.m. in "Ole Jim." The birthday celebration will be hosted by actress Julie Newmar, who is the mother of a multiply disabled deaf child and a strong supporter of special education programs.

The two outstanding teachers of deaf children will be announced during University Week at an awards ceremony on Monday, Oct. 21, at 3 p.m. in Elstad Auditorium. Nominations for the awards have been coming in since last April from Gallaudet faculty and the University's alumni association.

The lecture series will be initiated on Thursday, Sept. 26, by Dr. Mary Futrell, former president of the National Education Association and presently a professor at George Washington University, who will speak on "Changes in the American Society: Implications for Preparing Teachers for Special Children." There also will be a slide presentation on the 100 years of teacher education at Gallaudet. The lecture will be at 3:30 p.m. in Elstad Auditorium, followed by a reception.

The second lecture is slated for Saturday, Oct. 5, at 8:30 a.m. in the MSSD Auditorium. Dr. David Elkind, professor of education at Tufts University and an expert in the field of early childhood education and family education, will speak on "Providing the Best Start for Your Child: Developmentally Appropriate Practices." A reception will follow. There will be a $3 charge for this lecture; register by calling x5530.

The third presenter in the lecture series will be Dr. Lee Shulman, professor of education at Stanford University, president of the National Academy of Education, and an expert in curriculum, teacher evaluation, and subject matter issues in teaching. Shulman's talk, "Effective Instruction: The Key to Empowerment," which will also be the University Week lecture, will be on Monday, Oct. 21, at 3:30 p.m. in Elstad Auditorium, followed by a reception.

Two more lectures in the series will be scheduled for this spring. Martin said that SEHS also plans to hold the first International Symposium on Teacher Education in Deafness June 4-6 and plans to publish a volume of the history of teacher education at Gallaudet in 1992.

Announcements

The Gallaudet community is invited to a reception for Dr. Doin Hicks, who retired Aug. 31 as special assistant to the president, on Wednesday, Sept. 18, from 4-6 p.m. in "Ole Jim."

Ten-week classes for deaf and hearing children ages 4-13 will be offered by the National Deaf Dance Academy at Gallaudet on Saturday mornings beginning Sept. 28. Classes include ballet, jazz, tap, gymnastics, and ballet-tumbling for tots. The cost is $35 per 10-week class, or $85 for three dance classes. Gymnastics classes are $40 for 6- to 8-year-olds and $60 for 9- to 13-year-olds. For more information call x5591.

The District of Columbia's Rape Crisis Center will present a workshop on the subject of rape on Thursday, Sept. 26, from 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. in the Ely Center Multipurpose Room. The workshop, which is sponsored by the Social Work Department, the Office of Student Affairs, and the University Center, is being held in conjunction with Rape Awareness Week Sept. 21-28.

NTD actors steer the "Hispaniola" toward buried gold in "Treasure Island."

Yo-Ho-Ho!—it's 'Treasure Island'!

The National Theatre of the Deaf (NTD) will bring its original adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic tale of piracy and adventure on the high seas, Treasure Island, to the Elstad Auditorium stage on Oct. 4 and 5 at 8 p.m.

NTD's troupe of deaf and hearing actors combine spoken and sign languages in this presentation of the story of young Jim Hawkins' sea voyage on a ship crewed by pirates led by the one-legged, traitorous Long John Silver in their quest for buried treasure on a mysterious island.

NTD founder and artistic director David Hays promises the NTD version of the play will contain all the larger-than-life characters and adventure of the original production but he said that the NTD will take a gleefully informal approach to the classic.

Tickets for "Treasure Island" are $10 and can be ordered by calling the Gallaudet University Theatre Arts Department at x5500 (V) or x5502 (TDD).
